People who should especially consider carrying naloxone include:

- People who are currently taking high doses of prescription opioids for pain or are taking opioids along with alcohol and/or sedatives
- People with a history of overdose or of opioid use disorder
- People with active opioid use disorder
- People who use other drugs, such as cocaine and methamphetamines, which can be contaminated with the powerful opioid fentanyl
- Anyone who knows or is commonly around anyone who falls into the above categories
